Economics of Immigration Seminar

Course Focus:

This course systematically examines Bryan Caplan's Open Borders from cover to cover. Along the way, students will learn the fundamentals of the economics of immigration, with a focus on immigration's effects on global wealth creation, and the parallels between international trade in goods and international trade in labor. The course also explores immigration's net fiscal effects, cultural effects, and political effects, and explores a wide range of possibilities for immigration reform.

This is a mixed undergraduate and graduate class. While there will be shared lectures and classroom discussion, graduate students will be given more demanding homework assignments and more challenging exams.

Prerequisites:

I assume that you have taken Introductory Economics and know how to calculate Present Discounted Value. Labor Economics will be helpful but not required.

Texts:

Jones, Garrett. 2015. Hive Mind: How Your Nation's IQ Matters So Much More Than Your Own. Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press.

Note: Only graduate students are required to *'d readings.

Grading and Exams:

There will be one midterm and a final exam. The midterm counts 30%; the final exam is 35%; homework counts 20%; and seminar participation counts 15%. Students who rarely participate should expect to receive a D for the participation portion of their grade. These weights are fixed - improvement on the final will not retroactively raise your grade on the midterm.

Homework:

There will be five homework assignments during the semester. Depending upon how good a job you do, your homework will receive a check-plus (4 points), a check (3 points), or a check-minus (2 points) if you turn it in; otherwise you receive 0 points. Late homework loses one point. Late homework is no longer accepted after I pass out my suggested answers for a given assignment.

Office Hours

The best way to contact me is by email at bcaplan@gmu.edu. Many questions and requests can be satisfied by going to my homepage at <http://www.bcaplan.com>. My office is 11 Carow Hall; my office number is 3-2324. My official office hours are MW 1:30-3:00, but you can also schedule an appointment or just drop by and see if I'm available.

Tentative Schedule:

My proposed schedule for the semester follows. If it proves too ambitious, I will try to simply say less about each topic rather than cut the topics for the final weeks.
